1. The proposed drawing correction and/or the proposed substitute sheets of drawings, filed on 4/5/02 have been approved. A proper drawing correction or corrected drawings are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. The correction to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 13-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Feygin (5,354,414) in view of Deckard (5,639,070) and Dictionary of Ceramic Science and Engineering by O'Bannon.

Art Unit: 1731

Feygin teaches the basic claimed process for the rapid prototyping by sintering a powder. The process of Feygin includes the steps of:

- obtaining a series of digitized superposed sections of an object to be produced from a three dimensional representation of said object (e.g. col. 5, lines 47-51);
- spreading the powder in the form of a thin layer (e.g. col. 5, lines 62-65);
- increasing the density of the layer by mechanical compacting (e.g. col. 5, lines 62-65);
- bringing the densified layer to the sintering temperature by sweeping with a laser beam said layer (e.g. col. 6, line 2).

Feygin also discloses that the powder may be ceramic (col. 11, line 23), and the laser may be a YAG laser (col. 10, line 67).

Feygin does not specifically disclose heating the layer of powder prior to bringing it to the sintering temperature. Deckard discloses a similar process for producing parts by selective sintering. Deckard, however, discloses heating the layer of powder to be sintered prior to sintering. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time of the invention to include this heating step in the process of Feygin to reduce shrinkage as disclosed by Deckard.

Note that although Feygin does not specifically recite that the sintering therein is solid phase, it is submitted that this is indeed the case. Page 232 of Dictionary of Ceramic Science and Engineering by O'Bannon defines sintering as "the bonding of powdered materials by solid-state reactions at temperatures lower than those required for the formation of a liquid phase".

Determination of the specific heating temperature and laser wavelength would have been well within the realm of routine experimentation to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention. These parameters would have obviously been selected to optimize the process conditions and/or the properties of the final product.

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 13-21 (based on the rejection of canceled claims 1-5) have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
